Remember the entertainment for the benefit of the Glen Ridge Library at Miss Northall's school this evening. Various rumors have been floating about with reference to this commendable enterprise. It has been suggested that parties be made up for the contribution of sets of books, the theatre party as there are no sets of books in the library, such a gift would doubtless be sustained by the ladies of the "Clit" with heroic fortitude. If the Century Dictionary should happen to be donated we presume the result would be a thrill of delight and appreciation, and if the Encyclopedia Britannica (authorized edition) should be given we believe that the enthusiasm would reach positive rapture. No doubt a coach and four would be at the disposal of the Century party, while a special drawing-room car would probably be tendered those conveying the Britannica.
